WHITE SKINS IN TROPICS.

As riking theory is suggested by a recent article by Prof. L. W. Lyde-nothing less than that the white man is doomed to vanish off the face of the earth-yielding

The professor has coucluded that the original colour of the human skin was dark brown. The variations on that colour are the results of the weakoning or strengthening of the pigment, or skin-colouring, under different climatic conditions the object of this pigment being the protection of the protoplasm beneath the skin from dis-organisation by abnormal and therefore dangerous rays of sunlight. The effects of such rays on a man unprotected by a dark skin are, he says, nervous shock productive sometimes of total prostration and frequently leading to excesses, alcoholic and other.

Thus this original brown skin-colour has been developed to black in those races living in the tropics and constantly subjected to dangerous rays, while, on the other hand,

those races whose home is far from the Taking even ordinary precautions and sided by all the great modern knowledge of the migrascopic diseases of the tropics, the professor has come to the conclusion that it is possible for the white man-after two ears of acclimatisation to live even more immune from such diseases than the black. Butthe period of this immunity is not much longer thin moven years, after which the deteriorating effects of the abnormal heat of a skin not naturally protected begin to show thomselves, and render the system open to the attack of any of the great tropical diseases -malaria, yellow favor, cholera, etc. Thus permanent settlement of the tropics

CHINESE LENTERNS.

Lights, in most up-to-date countries, are Frequently Remarkable Woman exceedingly prossic. 'It is hard to invest a floren are street lamp or modern electric . The mothers of men of genius have been light with mysticism or romance. So the frequently somewhat remarkable women, picturesque Chinoco lautern is loft to that more remarkable than the fathers. Caesar's strange, subtle country where the roses mother was 'a strict and stately lady maye no scent, and the women no pethicoate; where to take off your hat is an insolant gosture, and to wear white garments is put jourself into mourning of het is Chinag with all its projudice was paradox; subtlety and stupidity. The gay-coloured paper globe known as the Chicase luntern is a distinct, indissejuble attribute of the land of opium and oranges, pullimeloes and lichees, chrysauthemums and foes. China with its teeming millions and ever growing clouds, still clings to a fragrant remnint of a picturesque past. After centuries of daily use, Chinese lanterns are as integral'a part of Oriental life as the pigtailed men;

the pigeon-toed women. It is only through the prejudice springing from disuse that Chinese and all other kinds of lanterns have been left behind by 1.72 he striving Latin races. There is no actual 75 reason why our scheme of illumination 1.75 should not be as picturesque and primitive her ninetieth year by her son a side, was as that of the Chinese. But, in England, lodged by him in Whitehall Palaco and we firmly believe in the blinding revelation of 300 candle power electricity; not in the flickering, shadow custing beams of oldtime lanterns. It has been left to China, almost the fidest of nations, to cherish the more romantic, daintier form of lightgiving. And so, through endless changes, the Chinese lantern remains one of the characteristic beauties of that flowercovered land. Occasionally, when phlegmatic nation becomes excited, and patties are in the air Chinese lanterns crosp from some hole and corner sway, flickering at dusk in our gardens and cosy nooks. At such times we lose, for the moment, the makern spirit of harsh whole shadows, with friendly blinking red, and green, and golde hove, we get back some echo or come comance.

China is a deep-souled country, with the outward insouciance and simplicity of child. Chins without its lanterns switt comfrom pagodis and temple, from stall and curving bridge, would be an Fgypt without its Sphinx. Light Peking with arclamps, andit is Peking no longer. Dispatch a Chinese voyager over miles of iris fields, across miniature bridges innumerable, with an unhalf his tharm. A large part of the wonder of the East is expressed by Chinese lanterns. Luminous-like wavering bloth rocked by the merest whisper of a breezer immortal. "Confessions," with much of a matter of conjecture. Inside sing crimeted shape some famumust herry and you it light not truly misible; nor wholly invisible. Dim blue, then misty green, then vivid yellow, it changes like a fairy kaldidoscope-A mirage, it draws the onlooker with the sheer mystery of its being. But in civilised Europe we have jutgrown the fatal fascinstion of such imaginative folly.

The inventor of Chinese lanterns must have been a genius in the art that conceal art. Out of painted paper, stretched upon bamboo rings, he evolved something which has withstood the test of numberless ages. A triumphant vindication of his skill, the lantern of the Chinese not only serves to illuminate their crooked streets, but stands for their national character. The true Oriental, like his lantern, andoubtedly possesses some centre of illumination in his strange person. But it is ever shifting under multifarious guises and grarments, until the seeker is half-persuaded of its total absence. A Chinese lantern is made of crinkled coloured paper artistically arranged in collapsible folds, like the side of a bellows or secondeon These lanterns are either globular o cylindrical in shape, and are generally decorated with flowers, or other designs. The paper on those lanterns, intended for use and not mere ornament, is always. thoroughly oiled; and the globe attached to a short stick or staff, for carrying pur-

As the streets in China and Japan are practically unlighted it is imperative for persons moving abroad after dark to carry lanterna. While Oxford-street and [Piccadilly cast a red glow on the sky, for away in the scented dusk of an Eastern night squat quaint, figures with bobbing lanterns and pattering steps are hurrying homewards along the streets of benevolence and righteouspess.

It is frankly foolish to suggest that our streets should "be lighted by Chinese lanterns. The whole offect would be too incongruous; like a page from a comic opera plunged into a Shakespeerean trugody. Such is the contrast between our street life and that of the Chinese cities. Still, there is no reason why-we aboutd'entirely neglect the obvious poetry and charm of such things, which Orientals in their wisdom-prize so highly. A really brilliant light is terribly blatant; it extenuites nothing on the principle that nothing deserves extenuation. But the dusky radiance of a Chinese lantern is something infinitely rare, exquisitely tender. that thrive by night.

From Our Scottish Correspondent. EDIVIDEGH. June 6 THE PRARE NECKLACE CARE.

After six days trial in the High Court of Justiciary, Edinburgh, before the Lord Justice-General (Lord Dunsdin) and a jury, Lieutenant Cocil Aylmer Cameron, R.F.A., and Ruby Cameron, his wife, were found guilty on a charge of attempted fraud, and were each sentenced to three years' penal. servitude. The story of the case has boen told in these "Scottish Letters," but it may be briefly summarised. Mrs Cameron obtained a pearl necklaco from Mesars Carrington, jewellers, London, on approbation; while it was in her possession she insured it at Lloyds for £6,500; before its return she had an imitation neckisce manufactured, perfect in every respect to the real one; and then, on 8th February 1911, represented that she had been assaulted and robbed in Edinburgh, and claimed the insurance money from the underwriters.

The account of the robbery was obviously improbable. Although it was said to have occurred in Shandwick Place, one of the busiest thoroughtures in Edinburgh at one of the busiest hours of the early evening, no witness could be brought forward to corroborate Mrs Cameron. On the contrary, two women swore that they were close to Mrs Cameron during the whole time, and that there was no assault of any kind. It was also brought out that, ten days before this alleged assault, Lieutenant Cameron had intimated to his bankers that he would shortly be in possession of £6,000 The case, so far, although it exposed a elizange cross-cut of social life, did not go far beyond the usual griminal groove. was the production of a large number letters, afterwards proved to be forgaries, which introduced a new and dramatic element. These letters had been carefully prepared by the Camerons. They were house, and were found, as they were intended to be found, by the police, This Bureau which aims quite | The most important of these letters were signed "Billie Walker." and were intended to establish Mrs Cameron's possession of a valuable pearl necklace, quito independent of the necklace which she had on approbation from Messrs Carrington. Had this been established, it would have been > the importance the police "discovering" this evidence. Another series of letters were signed "Mary Nutting," and their object was show that Mrs Cameron had not been negotiating with Mesers Carrington for herself buton behalf of Miss Nutting. Between them, these batches of correspondence established an admirable defence, the only flaw in which was that these letters were no proved to be genuine. The scheme was SUROPULA. clever up to a point; but it was not clever enough. It ought to have occurred to the seensed that inquiries would be made in the existence of Mr. Walker, and that if he could not be traced at any of the addresses given in the letters the circumstances would be considered suspicious. They ought also to have been prepared for Miss Nutting's denial of the authenticity of the letters attributed to her.

a great point gained for the defence. Hence

Mrs Cameron represented that the pearl necklace which was insured was given to NOTE. This mixture is pleasent to the laste her by Billie Walker; and, of course, the jury was saked, was there ever such person as Billie Walker at all? Billie was stated to be a gentleman with 230,000 year, who was frequently in London, and even although he was ab present lost in the wilds of Africa there ought to have been some witness who could say that he had known him. Connect for Mrs. family. Upon this Lord Dunedin com. mented .- Let us take an example from fiction; if Counsel had had the intimacy wonderful "Carte's Bleed Mixtare" June of Mrs Camp, he would have found the name of Mrs Harrisa household word in that family circle. Counsel also sugmeted that Billie Walker might not be a real name. but a lancy name for shother person, and there might be ressons for keeping back that names it was an ingenious suggestion. but one which was not entertained by the Lord Danedin pointed out that the was prious that the mistakes in the se sertain words in the Billie Walker letters were exactly the same as in those of the guilde letter of Mrs Cameron." prospects with the Military Fromotion Board, but his premusar was not good, and he instanced. A just splendid idea and The color was just a piece obstay better which a reas would write to his frient. Bu the point was that there were some correct, letter which also superied in one of Billie Walker's lebbers. That Mr Lance Wilson should have penned that sentence from the middle of the Punjeub, and that five days later Rillio Walker should have penned the same royds from the Manor House, Somerset, was a case of telepathy quite unprecedented Lord Danedin added, "they could come to no conclusion but one, and that was that the Billie Walker letter was written by Mrs Cameron

Some surprise was fe at the amount of the sentence. Lord Dunedin's words in his charge to the jury were:- "Quite spart from the punishment, he could not imagine any more distasteful duty than having by a verdict to put an end to the career of a young, promising, and talented officer, and to condemn to social degradation a young wife who was little belter than a girl but let them remember that the law in these matters drew no distinction between high and low, between rich and poor, between young and old. And doubtless t was in this spirit that he imposed the sentence of three years' penal servitude.

THE COMMISSIONER AND THE U.J. ASSEMBLY. Lord Glenconner, Lord High Commissioner to the Church of Scotland, paid a "friendly and unofficial visit" to the Assembly of the United Free Church: visit by H.M.'a representative to the deliberative Court of a non-State Church is believed to be unique in Scottish history. When Lord Kinnaird was Commissioner, he appeared in the U.F. Assembly, but there was no ceremony of reception, and no record of it was placed on the minutes.

In the reports of the Prison Commissoners for Scotland for 1910, it is shown that the number of commitments to prisons, including persons sentenced to penal seragain gives a large decrease 40,466, compared with 54,190 in decrease is apparent in practically every class of crime and offence.

REMEDY WORSE THAN COMPLAINT:

Bolow we give a more or less exnet transistion from a pative daily newspaper. seems hardly credible that such deeds as are here recorded should be possible; on the other hand it is well-known that in the inland districts the soldiers are practically omnipotent and the people have no means: of opposing them, unless there be some strong minded literati who is willing to take the lead and at the same time take the rick of failure.

"In the Tung On district there is a place named Sai Ning. The Magistrate of the place is named Ch'iu, and to him has been entrusted the duty of clearing the countryside of brigands. Since he was supplied with soldiers for this purpose it is not known that these soldiers have been successful in toizing one robber. Indeed, instead of clearing the district of these pe ple, the soldiers themselves have been robbing on all sides. Not only so, but they have been guilty of outraging women so that the hair stands on end at the tale of their doings. The worst case is that in a village named Wai Tsuen. The name of the master of the house is Tset; he was a farmer. He has been married less than year. Seven men entered his private filluse on the plea that they were searching for robbers, and then they took hold of hi wife and they treated her in such a way that it is not known whether she will live or die. (The details of the story are too revolting to publish). The homes on either side of this house were rubbed of anything that struck the fancy of the soldiers. Or this occasion one of the clan had a very valuable bangle robbed from his arm. He went' to see the Magistrate in person, but could not get any promise of a trial, merely the order that the bangle should be given back. When the soldiers stole women's bangles they took them to the dealers in these things and changed them for men's ornaments, they also did the same when they had stolen women's garments. The people have no power and do not know what to do, so they look on askance with suppressed anger. When soldiers are sent into the country districts to clear the country-side of robbers, it is expected that there will be peace for the people, but in this case not only is there no peace. but there is trouble on trouble, for the soldiers fare indeed worse than the bri ands. Alas, for the last two years, our country towns have suffered from inutilations and other troubles, so that the people hardly know on what side to turn to find means of supplying their daily needs. What, then, have we done that we in addition from having soldiers in our midst, whose doings are worse than the deeds of the Such is the article published in a respect, able paper and read by all who can read. We wonder what truth there is in such allegations. Is it possible that the high officials do not rend these descriptions of life? If they read them, do they pass them over because they have too much to do to take in hand the alleged doings of their underlings ? In any case, it is a terrible condition of affairs that such things should be possible, for it stems difficult to believe that circumstantial statements like the above should find their way into the public press and yet have no foundation in fact. Probably there is some exaggerati n but, after all these stories indicate a con-

should have to suffer the misery that follows dition of affairs that would hardly be allowed even among a tribe of savages...

SACRILEGE IN PORTUGAL.

The Seculo reports that a disgraceful scene of profamation took place at the Attalaya church at Aldegalega, close to Lisbon. A group of individuals broke into the church and, seizing the images and statues of the saints, placed one at the door of each tavern in the town; then, returning to the church, they tore down and destroyed all the decorations and altar belongings, afterwards making a great bonfire of them. The scene has caused great indignation among the better-class people.

The Mundo states that great rivalry exists at Muge between Republicans and Monarchists. There are conflicts daily. It was reported that the Monarchists had painted white crosses upon the doors of the habitations of the Republicans, declaring that inmates will be soon done awny with.

Great indignation prevails among Re-600 publicons, who demand forces to maintain

According to the latest statistics, says & contemporary the total amount of domestic bonds. remaining in Japan is sot more than Y695,660,000 : to this must be added about Y100,000,000 held by the Government Deposits Bureau. The total amount remaining in Japan, therefore, does not exceed has just returned from taking part in the Y800,000,000. It follows then, that the balance, amounting to nearly Y400,000,000 must be abroad. When to this is added the real foreign loans be obtained payable in the Philippine totalling Y1,500,000,000, the aggregate of the loans held abroad must be about YI,900,000,000. The domestic bonds held abroad are known to consist chiefly of 5 per cent. ailways. The amount of interests puid on these bonds abroad must therefore be fairly large, say, roughly, Y100,000,000 a year. This is merely the amount being paid at the present time. But when it is remembered that the tendency is for these foreign bonds to increase rather than to diminish and that therefore Japan will be called upon in the future to pay even more in the way of interest on her loans, the people may well have

As to the future, we note that the Premier, Prince KATSURA, has in at interview expressed himself in hopeful terms. He stated that by the year 1914 the War bonds will be entirely redeemed. These bonds being of productive nature, however, it remains uncertain whether they will be redeemed in 1914. RAMBLING NOTES.

It's been hard work heaping when now to the grindstone this week after the falli Scations of the Coronation period. But it has had to be done. We've mid "Goodbye" to holidays now until August Bank Hollday. Then there'll be a weary stretch until Christmas. We badly need a day off say during November. If only King Edward's birthday wore keptus " Peace Day."

Everybody has been more or less "washed out" this past week as the result of the late hours kept during the celebrations. One thing, however, the Coronation has not been such a serious business with us as with the Home folk. Those desirous of 'seeing the sights" were urged by the newspapers to earry food and drink with them, to take breakfast at 2.30 hour of 8 a.m., originally fixed for the Review at Happy Valley!

I'm wondering, as I write, how many people will sign to-day's date as "June 31st." If they follow the lend of one of the leading shipping offices here everybody will. The China Med during the week announced in its shipping columns that a certain steamer was due. to arrive on "Saturday, July 1st." Result :- a note from the shipping office desiring that the date be corrected to "Saturday, June 31st" ! Note consigned to waste-paper basket. Next day another chit to same effect! Also claimed by W. P. B. Third day yet another! As this was getting a bit monotonous, shipping office was very politely advised that there are only 30 days in June! Is it the heat, I wonder?

Some glaring errors are occasionally made in translating Reuter's Incasages to the newspapers. This week, Mr Editor, your contemporaries have been having merry time of it along these lines . One Orangery! But your evening contemporary beats the the lot. Instead of stating that the race-horse Cardinal Benufort was scratched from a certain race, it publishes news of the death of the Duke of Beaufort! Whew!

With the appearance of double-deck grounds of Buckingham Palace, and tramcars Hongkong is in truth getting up-to-date. But the strange thing is that nobody seems to like the idea of occupying the top seats. Is it modesty which makes them shrink from the prominence which this would involve ? I can hardly think so. Modesty in Hongkong-the thought of it! No. I'm afraid it's slackness—the climb does it. But after all what could be nicer than a run down to shaukiwan in the cool of the evening on the top of a dashing
